

Refinement

Weekly Report 04/16/18 to 04/20/18

When I began this course, I never imagined that I would create such an extensive portfolio of research and experience, never mind receive such great feedback from professionals. Although I have discovered that Occupational Therapy may not be the perfect field for me, I have gained so much professional confidence and refinement. This week was a chance for me to fully update my physical and digital portfolio as well as improve the layout of my digital portfolio.

I completed printing and organizing all of the work I have accomplished so far this year in my binder and uploaded all of it to my similarly organized website. In addition to this, I found a royalty-free stock image that stylishly compliments my brand's color scheme and I am using it as the background of the header for each page of my website. Since the headers on my website used to be quite random and uncoordinated, this step significantly enhanced the professional appearance of my online presence.

My mentor has also recently completed my portfolio evaluation and her feedback has boosted my confidence to continue through this course with strength. She remarked that my professionalism and attention to detail are very impressive. This is especially rewarding because improving my ability to concentrate on long-term projects (such as this portfolio) has been one of my SMART goals for the year. It is incredible to receive validation on this from a professional.

Going forward, I plan to take the final steps in the physical model of my final product before creating the informational brochure that will be handed out to the public. I also will soon schedule a time when I may go to the Frisco Commons Park for several hours to display my product children and families. I anticipate with great excitement this next fundamental step in the progress of my product.
